Chapter 1 by Story Wars

It had been three hundred and forty nine years for my civilization on the Equinox Explorer.

We had thrived.

Our community of over sixteen thousand humans flourished in our first years out in space. We had everything in order with equal benefits, equal stations and equal care. Even our leading captains had all stayed within the same boundaries and benefits that the commons had, had.

Yet now, our way of life, is threatened. Our search for a new planet and a new home has failed. With endless quests and sacrifices of sending more and more space sailors out into the unknown, we have only come back empty. No travel pod has returned with an ounce of dirt or molecule of oxygen that could show us a chance of having another stable planet for our life. Our air supply has only been granting us three hundred and fifty years of breathe-ability and so we need to head back to the Blue Planet. Earth.

The only thing that is flawed in our new plan is the fact that we had to leave for a reason and what if that reason isn't solved?
